Anti-Displacement Task Force reports finalized

The city released three Anti-Displacement Task Force reports late last month.

By Jeffrey Shwom

Almost 20 months after beginning its effort, the City of Somerville released three Anti-Displacement Task Force (ADTF) Reports on January 30, with hopes of informing and guiding city and state level policies concerning displacement. Three committees were formed “to develop recommendations aimed at reducing the rate of displacement,” per the city.

Residential

The Residential task force [1] listed 10 recommendations, the first of which is to “build on the efforts...in drafting a rent stabilization home rule petition filed with the State Legislature and continue to advocate.” Termed “critical components” of the Home Rule Petition include an annual cap on rent increases (with exemptions for Continued on page 4

June Bug restaurant wins award

By Cathleen Twardzik

Somerville restaurant June Bug is one winner of an eating spot.

In fact, they were just crowned “The Best of Somerville: Winner of Best Pizza.”

Therefore, be sure to try their awesome “naturally-leavened pizza.”

Interestingly, “June Bug is a new concept from the team at [the restaurant] Field & Vine. The food follows the same philosophy, and [it] is sourced locally and in-season. The cuisine is casual – with emphasis on the beautiful Maine-built wood fire oven. We cook naturally-leavened pizzas, fun salads, wood fire-roasted veggies and more,” according to their website.

Besides reserving a table at this small eatery, which is located at 251 Washington St., large party and event booking is available, as Continued on page 9

Response to: Davis Square residents contemplate proposed 25-level high-rise on Elm Street

Liz says:

To be fair, the only inaccuracy to the NIMBY flyer is how ugly it made the building. Not a single rendering produced by Copper Mill has captured the full height of the structure. I think only being zoned up to 4 stories is unreasonable, but I would prefer that the entire square be reworked in 6-10 story buildings with a variety of owners and features than have one centralized monolith.

Response to: Advocates cry foul over first SPS Building Project survey

Bill Gilman says:

1. Got the wrong school in the cover picture. It's the winter hill school that is currently vacated, seeing a massive drop in enrollment and significant stressor for the teachers and admins. The school is great, by the way, and still a good choice for your kid.
 2. The city already knows what the opinions and desires of the winter hill and brown school communities are. Do you want a neighborhood school? Yes. What if it costs more? That's ok. It's budget override time, y'all.
- But, with this mayor/administration, it's always survey time, not action time. "I've got a survey for that" should be their motto for the next election.

Casimir H. Prohosky Jr. says:

Since we're momentarily fixated on the choice of photo for this article, I'll just jump in here and point out that the text of the resolution in part states: "...regarding the replacement of the Winter Hill and, potentially, Brown School." You're welcome.

Parking Woes

I'm lucky I'm in walking distance of Davis Square if I need something down there. But what are drivers to do if they need to shop there?

There are two municipal lots that are filled up quickly. There are still a handful of meters scattered around the square. My go to spots are across from Redbones on Chester St.

if you survived the recent storm, you may have had trouble finding a parking spot. There was parking in school lots during the posted emergency times. It's certainly a challenge to grab these few spaces. As the city keeps trying to help the pedestrians and bicycles the drivers find themselves in a battle for parking.

It would be great if the city added public parking instead of taking more away. You can't even stop in front of a corner store to run in for a lottery ticket. Pretty soon we will all be on bikes or on foot.

Especially during a snow emergency, it's first come first serve. There's a battle for the few spots around the city. Then you have a time limit in when you have to move your car.

Here are your thoughts:

"Fkg ridiculous! We had an open space in front of our house and the person who came to take that parking space told us he lives on Winter Hill and drove up and down the streets until he found the open space here, Powderhouse area! All the spaces taken away number in the hundreds! Some of us cannot ride bikes!"

"Growing up in Somerville parking was relatively easy, we lived right around the corner from Post 19 and dad was a member. He parked in their parking lot."

"Goodness gracious, is winter '25 gonna be the big debate of parking in a Somerville driveway? My parents' driveway is 9 feet across. Good luck in parking these big SUVs in it. Not to mention siblings who crashed into the house because they don't know how to back up."

Don't put out any good furniture to save a parking space. Those days are over.

More cars, more construction and fewer parking spots is a growing problem. Hang in there.

rent-restricted housing and owner-occupied units), stabilized rents between turnover of tenants, and a 15-year certificate of occupancy requirement for new construction.

Other residential recommendations include encouraging building sales to affordable housing developers, a local ordinance that requires landlords to notify tenants when selling, and keep existing levels of funding for legal services for tenants facing eviction. Morena Zelaya, co-chair of the Residential Displacement Committee, exclaimed, "As this report outlines, the city is doing so many great things to try and meet those challenges but there is always more work to do!"

Creative

The Creative Displacement Committee [2] reminded us through their efforts that "Creatives nationwide are under attack" where they live and work, in how they share their work and make money, how much they earn and pay for necessities.

Musician Jenn Harrington [3] said, the report "is a genuine reflection of our collective efforts. It's informative, well-organized, passionate, and deeply human. In many ways, it's a work of art – as much as a report can be. We wanted to capture the heart and the pain of our creatives and our community, ensuring they know they've been heard and that we are truly honored to have them here."

The six policy initiatives focus on more integration of arts and creativity into the city ecosystem, an effort to cultivate and preserve creative space, using zoning and city ordinances to support Arts and Culture, enhancing business development, and establishing funding sources. Ideas include expanding grants through the Somerville Arts Council, a proposed property tax surcharge, and adoption of a "Statement of Values for the Arts" to remind folks and the city of the importance of keeping arts and the creative economy top of mind.

Small Business

For the Small Enterprise Displacement Committee [4], it divided its nine actions into the short, middle and long term. Ted Fields, Senior Economic Development Planner, the committee focused on three goals: "How can the city stop businesses from having to move or close? What can the city do right away to help? What parts of commercial displacement are beyond the city's control and need help from the State or Federal government?" For example, a final version of the Commercial Leasing Handbook, which aims to help local small business owners understand commercial property leasing, has already been prepared by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) for city and Committee review.

The Committee also called for a Commercial Tenant Bill of Rights, changing the Vacant Storefront ordinance, an expansion of the city's Site Finding Assistance Program, and suggested creation of an "entity to find and manage spaces or businesses to rent at lower prices." Jessica Eshleman, committee member and Executive Director of Union Square Main Streets, said "Somerville has a real opportunity to continue to be a national leader in anti-displacement efforts, especially for independently-owned, small businesses. Opportunities for zoning to encourage affordable commercial space in conjunction with density bonuses ... is a strategy not yet happening in our country. This is one of the things that excites me most in the report. If anyone can do it, Somerville can."

In a press release from the Mayor's Office, "The ADTF was called into action in 2023 by Mayor Ballantyne in response to not only the housing crisis but also rental pressures on local businesses, nonprofits, and the cultural arts that can lead to displacement." The Spring 2025 date for a panel discussion with committee members and film viewing commissioned by the Task Force has yet to be set.

Debate over school construction plans: City Council reviews Winter Hill replacement and community concerns

By Carlie Lombardi

On Thursday, February 6, The School Building Facilities and Maintenance Special Committee met virtually to discuss important issues surrounding the future of school infrastructure in the city. The meeting, which covered various topics, was focused on the process of replacing the Winter Hill Community Innovation School, the results of the community feedback survey, and the timeline for school construction.

Survey Sparks Debate Over School Plans

The School Building Community Feedback Survey, which was posted without first being reviewed by the Community Advisory Group (CAG), was the subject of a heated debate during the meeting. Several council members and community representatives expressed concerns that the survey was biased in favor of a single large school model rather than preserving neighborhood schools.

City officials defended the survey, stating that it was intended to collect broad community feedback. However, some argued that its design appeared to guide responses toward a predetermined outcome. There were calls for the survey to be withdrawn, its data discarded, and a revised version to be developed, but officials ultimately decided to keep the survey active, with the possibility of making revisions based on further review.

Community Decision Making Concerns

The meeting revealed some frustrations among CAG members and school communities. Many felt that their voices were not being heard and that the public engagement process lacked transparency. Both Winter Hill and Brown School representatives voiced opposition to any proposal that would make their schools into a larger institution, fearing it would disrupt the close-knit environments that they have with their current educational models.

Additionally, some council members highlighted that past miscommunications and a lack of overall decision making had reduced the trust in city led school projects. They urged city officials to take community concerns seriously to ensure a fair and transparent process moving forward. Winter Hill School Replacement and Construction Timeline

The committee also reviewed the timeline for replacing the Winter Hill Community Innovation School, which was closed due to structural concerns. City officials provided an update on the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) process, noting that the project has advanced to the next phase, which includes forming a team and hiring an architect by mid 2025.

A major point of discussion was whether the new school should be built on the current Winter Hill site or moved to another location, such as Trum Field or the DPW site. Council members debated the logistical and financial challenges of each option and emphasized Continued on page 11

Beacon Hill Roll Call

Volume 50 - Report No. 6 • February 3-7, 2025 • Copyright © 2025 Beacon Hill Roll Call. All Rights Reserved. By Bob Katzen

Beacon Hill Roll Call can also be viewed on our website at www.thesomervilletimes.com

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on roll calls from the week of Feb. 3-7, 2025. There were no roll Calls in the Senate last week.

$425 MILLION FOR SHELTER SYSTEM (H 57)

House 126-26, approved and sent to the Senate a fiscal 2025 supplemental budget that includes $425 million to fund the state's family shelter system and make some changes to tighten eligibility. The vote was almost strictly along party lines with all Republicans voting against it and all but two Democrats voting for it. The Democrats say the measure makes major reforms while the GOP says the bill does not go far enough.

"From the beginning of the shelter system crisis, the House has worked to reform the emergency assistance program to ensure that it remains financially viable," said House Speaker Ron Mariano (D-Quincy). "That's why the House led the effort to cap the maximum length of stay, and to require job training programs for folks in the shelter system, reforms that this supplemental budget builds on. By creating stricter eligibility requirements, along with increased security measures, this supplemental budget is the latest iteration of the House's continued commitment to protecting vulnerable children and families in Massachusetts in a fiscally sustainable manner."

"Over the past several years, as the population of the emergency shelter system has grown, the House has attempted to uphold the commonwealth's right to shelter law while also being mindful of the long-term fiscal sustainability of the program," said Rep. Aaron Michlewitz (D-Boston), Chair of the House Committee on Ways and Means. "The reforms contained in this bill will ensure that right to shelter is maintained by further capping the length of stay and verifying eligibility, while also enacting stricter background checks on those who enter the shelter system to better protect the families who need these services the most."

"I voted against [the bill] because Massachusetts cannot continue pouring taxpayer money into the emergency shelter system without implementing real, lasting reforms," said Rep. Steven Xiarhos (R-Barnstable). "As a former police officer with 40 years of experience, I know firsthand how proper criminal background checks should be conducted, and the simple CORI check outlined in this bill doesn't even come close. Without comprehensive background screenings at the state, federal and international levels, we risk compromising public safety and failing to protect the communities we serve."

"Though there were some small reforms to the shelter system, they were only temporary and fell far short of what was necessary to address the problems associated with the program," said Rep. Joseph McKenna (R-Sutton). "Without substantial and permanent reforms, many of which were proposed by Republican amendments that were unfortunately rejected out of hand without even cursory consideration, this was not a bill that will adequately address the long-term financial stability of the EA shelter program, so was not a bill I could support."

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

Rep. Christine Barber	Yes
Rep. Mike Connolly	Yes
Rep. Erika Uytterhoeven	Yes

BROADER BACKGROUND CHECKS (H 57)

House 26-125, rejected an amendment that would expand the background checks that the state must conduct on emergency assistance shelter applicants by mandating universal criminal background checks that include criminal records at the state, federal and international levels; immigration or residency status; and presence on international or domestic criminal watch lists.

"While the underlying bill requires individuals applying for emergency assistance housing benefits to disclose prior criminal convictions and calls for CORI checks to be conducted prior to placement, these checks are limited to crimes committed in Massachusetts," said amendment sponsor Rep. Brad Jones (R-North Reading). "If we are serious about keeping dangerous criminals out of the shelter system, then we need to strengthen the background check requirement and mandate more comprehensive universal background checks that will disclose criminal records not only at the state level, but also at the federal and international levels."

Rep. Michael Day (D-Stoneham) said that the amendment was an attempted Republican "backdoor" to "strangle our emergency shelter law altogether and kill it from within." He said the background checks the amendment would require would also check the education backgrounds of applicants, credit scores and financial information.

"Now we want to find out the credit-worthiness of a young family applying for emergency shelter," said Day. He sarcastically asked if this credit check was going to make the shelters and residents safer -- finding out what Kohl's thinks about their ability to get a credit card."

(A "Yes" vote is for the broader background checks. A "No" vote is against them.)

Rep. Christine Barber	No
Rep. Mike Connolly	No
Rep. Erika Uytterhoeven	No

REDUCE FUNDING FROM $425 MILLION TO $200 MILLION

House 26-126 rejected an amendment that would reduce funding for the emergency assistance shelter program from $425 million to $200 million.

"The emergency assistance shelter program continues to cost the state's taxpayers approximately $1 billion annually, which is not sustainable without implementing substantive reforms to help reduce costs and promote greater transparency," said amendment sponsor Rep. Brad Jones (R-North Reading). "The State Auditor is currently conducting a comprehensive audit of the Executive Office of Housing and Livable Communities, including the emergency shelter system, which should help to identify ways to improve efficiency, while recent changes in immigration laws at the federal level should help to lower costs by reducing the number of people coming to Massachusetts seeking shelter. By reducing the shelter program's funding allocation to $200 million, the state can continue to provide core services to Massachusetts residents in need while allowing additional time to see how the recent changes will impact enrollment."

Rep. Aaron Michlewitz (D-Boston) said he is under no illusion that if the House approves this reduction, the Republicans will actually vote for the bill itself. He noted that reforms we're implementing in the bill are major and the House needs to give the Healey administration time to see these through. He argued that the bill allows the state to get through the remainder of the fiscal year, and during the upcoming fiscal 2026 budget debate in April we can see how the reforms are going and if we have to make changes.

(A "Yes" vote is for the reduction to $200 million. A "No" vote is against the reduction.)

Rep. Christine Barber	No
Rep. Mike Connolly	No
Rep. Erika Uytterhoeven	No

12-MONTH RESIDENCY REQUIRED (H 57)

House 26-126, rejected an amendment that would require that in order to be eligible for benefits under the emergency assistance shelter program, an applicant must have resided in Massachusetts for twelve consecutive months immediately prior to the date of application. The applicant must also provide an acceptable form of verification such as tax returns; a MA REAL-ID; a

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Illustrated by Jim Clark

Turn on your love light, Somerville.

Our View Of The Times

Valentine's Day is coming around once next week, an occasion that many hold dear and cherish. For some, in fact, it is one of their favorite days of the year.

Sure, many people think it's a corny tradition. Just another gimmick to ramp up sales of candies, cards, wine and what-not. For others, it's a special time that provides an opportunity to express their deepest affections to the one – or many – who mean so much to them.

Whatever one's personal view, it's difficult to disagree with the idea that we could all use a soft touch and a few gentle words in these times of contentious bickering and extreme divisiveness. It doesn't take a box of chocolates or a 32-stanza love poem to show a little appreciation for one's friends and family, or that one special someone.

Remember when we were kids, and part of the day was spent passing out those store-bought or handmade "Be My Valentine" cards at school? Some did so, while others didn't. Still, it was a nice ritual that brought us all a little closer and exposed us to some rudimentary social skills, so important for a developing child.

What would it be like as adults to swap such tokens of sentiment with our co-workers, colleagues, etc.? Embarrassing? Endearing? Who can say? You'll never really know unless you try it.

If nothing else, take a moment or two on this day to smile at a stranger as you pass them by. Open a door for another. Find ways to show that you have love within you. This can be far more satisfying than giving or getting a mere box of chocolates.

Community Gospel concerts celebrate their 20th year

By Barbara Allys

“I love getting people of different ages and backgrounds together to sing,” says Stacie Clayton, founder and director of the annual Community Gospel Choir concerts, which have been held in honor of Black History Month almost every February since 2005.

The singers in these joyful, spirited concerts are of all races and backgrounds, and come from Somerville, Medford, Cambridge, Boston and other local communities. The only requirements for performing in these yearly concerts are the enjoyment of singing with other people and a love for gospel music.

Clayton, who is originally from Jamaica and came to the U.S. at age 18, has helped lead the weekly music program at the Somerville Community Baptist Church since 1994. She explains that in order to reach a wide audience, the Community Gospel concerts have been held in a variety of locations over the years, including Tufts University, Medford’s Chevalier Theater, and at churches in Medford, Norwood, and other nearby towns. “This event is free and entertaining for all ages,” Clayton says.

This year’s Community Gospel Choir concert will take place Sunday, February 23, 5 pm at the Somerville Community Baptist Church, 31 College Avenue, two blocks from the Davis Square T-station. The theme of this year’s concert is “Heaven.”

The singers will be accompanied by an ensemble of professional jazz musicians and the concert will be emceed by Medford’s former Poet Laureate Terry E. Carter. For more information, see www.ilovescbc.org.

Barbara Allys is a long-time Somerville resident who enjoys Gospel music and has attended these concerts for many years.

King George

By Bob (Monty) Doherty

At the end of the victorious eight-year American Revolutionary War, some of his officers wanted to crown him “King.” They had grown to love and respect their leader and wanted him to continue to lead the country that they had fought for. General George Washington, the object of their honor and devotion, resolutely turned them down. He reminded them that they had just fought and won a war for freedom, not for a monarchy.

Reflecting back to the war’s beginning, his original directive had been to organize the first American Army, which was made up primarily of ragtag farmers and frontiersmen. He then rescued Boston, which was occupied by the British Army. From his headquarters in Cambridge and his Prospect Hill summit, he planned and executed what was to be his first famous victory ... the bloodless evacuation of Boston.

Who was he?

- At the early age of 16, this Virginian was already a gifted horseman. He later became the Assistant Surveyor of the Shenandoah Valley and the following year became its official Surveyor.

Concerns raised at committee meeting regarding our seniors

By Lexi O'Neil

Concerns are on the rise as Seniors are at the forefront of the Monday, February 3, meeting held by the Equity, Gender, Seniors, Families and Vulnerable Populations Committee. Some of the topics on the agenda varied from helping seniors deal with the grocery inflation prices to ensuring their voices are being represented and heard in council meetings and decisions.

Transportation and Accessibility Challenges

Councilor Strezo compliments the council's efforts, especially in terms of their senior transportation, despite the competitive programs in the surrounding area. She shares a personal story of how one of the competing companies left her deaf grandmother alone in Davis Square, without aid or a ride. Strezo notes, "Sometimes it could take literally five hours to get to one medical appointment. This is their whole day. Would any of us sit through a five-hour waiting period to go sometimes a mile? That is what a lot of seniors have to deal with."

Councilor Strezo challenged city programs again when concerns such as parking being inaccessible to seniors were dismissed. She voices how our older folks cannot walk five blocks for a funeral or church just because a program assumes them to be able-bodied, and should be more aware of the reality and respect that our seniors deserve to park near their churches, favorite restaurants, and more within the community because they, too, are valued members who deserve an equal standing in.

Recent Transportation Changes and Budget Updates

Members of the city's Equity, Gender, Seniors, Families and Vulnerable Populations Committee have expressed concerns over the quality of transportation options provided for our senior population. — Photo by Bobbie Toner

The most recent change to transportation was upped from residents being able to go grocery shopping just once a week to twice a week, thanks to the budget oversights by our council members. Members brought up struggling to find information efficiently via the council's website, but they did promise to be working on it and are aware that their programs are evolving faster than their being able to keep up with the changes.

As long as seniors are over the age of 60, or have a permanent disability, they receive the benefit of the transportation services per the budgets offered. The hot meals and cold meal-to-go project is offered to residents multiple times a week, which helps to bridge some of the gaps in food insecurity while new budgets are being reviewed in the meantime.

Budget and Inflation Concerns

The council is working hard to ensure that there is enough funds to go around, and the program has continued to grow in recent years as they work to review new changes and additional funding options. However, concerns related to budgets and inflation are being raised due to the current standing of our political climate.

Improving Communication and Outreach

The council is considering changes on how to better share their information in order to help their residents to get connected. They do make consistent posts on social media and ensure information is passed on to other entities, such as us here at The Somerville Times, and always working to be mindful of the older members of our community. They recently met with the Mass Senior Action Council in order to work on their outreach and future planning, and to continue collaborating with other project partners to ensure the maximum outreach and resolutions to current issues among the community.

School construction plans

the need for a decision that best serves students and the community.

Another significant issue raised was the Proposition 2 1/2 debt exclusion, which would require voter approval for a tax increase to fund the new school construction. Council members stressed the importance of gaining public support for the increase, acknowledging that strong communication and community buy-in would be essential for success.

Key Takeaways

- The city will continue looking for potential locations for the Winter Hill School, taking into account factors like open space preservation and accessibility.
- Selecting an architect and site will begin in mid 2025, with a goal of finalizing plans by the end of the year.

- Council members stressed the need for clear and transparent communication to ensure a successful school building project.

The next committee meeting will revisit these issues and continue efforts to reach a community driven resolution for the future of the city's schools.

Community Benefits from Somernova

By Chris Dwan

The mood was cautiously optimistic at the Argenziano School cafeteria on a Wednesday night a couple of weeks ago. Nearly a hundred people gathered in person, and another 80 or so joined online, to see the Union Square Neighborhood Council [1] and Rafi Properties [2] share a “mid-point update” in their negotiations towards a Community Benefits Agreement (CBA) for the proposed “Somernova” [3] development.

The organizers were at pains to make clear that, contrary to a recent Cambridge Day article [4], the meeting was not any sort of conclusion. No final deal was to be announced and no commitments have been inked. This is in part because so much relies on the city-run process [5] to update the underlying zoning along central Somerville Ave. That parallel process is expected to submit zoning text for consideration by the City Council, well, sometime real soon now. Once the zoning is submitted, the CBA will be finalized, meaning that the city council will have all the needed specifics in hand prior to any vote.

Within those limitations, Wednesday was intended to share points on which the negotiating team had reached “consensus.” There were no handouts or summaries. The slides, which are no longer online, were mostly just a table of contents anyway. In later conversations I learned that the negotiating team had worked in silos – divvying up topics without working through the compromises that, in my experience, constitute the bulk of this sort of negotiation. Put another way, it seems likely to me that some of this will necessarily be walked back when the budgetary rubber meets the road.

For all that, the announcements were good and well received:

- Arts and Creative Enterprise (ACE) will be 8% of the development, a total of more than 100,000 square feet.
- An “advisory team” will guide the process of filling the ACE space, and Somerville artists will get priority for public exhibitions.
- Housing will be included, and the payment to the Affordable Housing Trust Fund (a linkage fee), will be higher than required by current zoning.
- The project has agreed to track metrics on traffic, parking, and transit and to pause work if predetermined goals are not met.
- The Community Center

The community benefits update meeting was well attended.

will be at least 12k square feet, plus another 7k square feet of indoors multi-purpose space, and will be run by a still-to-be-formed nonprofit. The developer will provide 10 years of operating funding, after which the nonprofit will transition to grant and philanthropic support.

- The project will include a call center to field construction complaints and facilitate communications.
- USNC wants, and Rafi is open to, a Project Labor Agreement (PLA) with the trade unions. Rafi has committed, at least verbally, to preferentially employing Somerville residents and women, and to working with the high school to support vocational careers for recent graduates.
- The buildings will all be net zero or better, and the commercial buildings will be LEED [6] Platinum.
- Rafi has committed to using 100% native species in the plantings, to planting at least 150 trees, to not using chemical rodenticides, and to installing raptor habitats.

The change in tone from the meetings in the fall of 2023 was remarkable. Gone was the tone-deaf boosterism from the project team and its close allies. Gone too was the razor sharp and occasionally brutal opposition from the neighborhood. Even the small group of neighbors who showed up on Wednesday still ready to oppose the whole thing seem to have read the room and moderated their comments. In the place of all that, I saw mutual understanding, better defined roles, and collegial working relationships that will be essential for a project of this scale. The developer is no longer trying to wholesale rewrite zoning -and- propose their project -and- sugar coat it with incentives and benefits. It has taken a while, but the city is working the zoning, the neighborhood is advocating for itself, and the developer will eventually have clear guard rails within which to design a project.

Honestly, watching my neighborhood work through this is giving me a tiny sliver of much needed hope for democracy and civic process right about now.

We’re not done, but we’re finally getting somewhere.

He joined the staff of the British during the French and Indian War and tried to instruct them to fight like the Indians, instead of marching into battle in close formation wearing brilliantly colored uniforms.

• When fighting and bloodshed followed the passing of the Boston Port Bill, he told the Virginia Assembly, “I will raise one thousand men, subsist them at my own expense, and march, myself at their head, for the relief of Boston.”

• He was forty-two and a Virginia delegate when the First Continental Congress met in Philadelphia on September 5, 1774. This meeting was three days after the British attack on our Powder House, which drew over twenty thousand armed patriots to the location. It proved to be the dress rehearsal of the Concord and Lexington Battle eight months later.

• On hearing reports of the Battle of Lexington and Concord, Washington originally refused to lead the Patriots. He viewed the conflict as a skirmish. But after hearing the results of the Battle of Bunker Hill, he agreed to lead them.

• On arrival in Massachusetts, he wanted to see the view of Boston from Prospect Hill before he met with colonial leaders at Cambridge. Six months later on January 1, 1776, he raised the first American flag on that site.

It is said that King George III stated that General Washington would be “The greatest man in the world” if he retired after the Revolutionary War. Americans agreed and elected him our first President. He is considered the father of our country.

Black Cat Rescue approves of declawing ban

By Harry Kane

A new law signed by Massachusetts Gov. Maura Healey makes it illegal to declaw felines. That's good news for cats and for foster operations like Black Cat Rescue, which is a Somerville based all-volunteer network dedicated to saving the lives of homeless black cats and cats with special needs.

The cat act (S.2552) prohibits inhumane feline declawing except in rare situations of medical necessity. The act was signed into law January 9 and takes effect on April 8.

"From a rescue perspective, the biggest thing we see, if we are getting declawed cats surrendered to us, is it's nearly always for a behavioral issue," said Jennifer Stott, co-founder of Black Cat Rescue.

Black Cat Rescue is a nonprofit organization that began in 2007 to provide black cats and cats with medical and behavioral issues a healing, therapeutic foster home to facilitate the adoption process.

Stott founded the organization along with co-founder Samantha McDuffee, and their operation has grown from 60 cats per year to 100 cats. While their no-kill cat rescue organization is smaller than most, they specialize in what she refers to as "undercats," which are cats that have a harder time getting adopted.

Black cats and cats with special needs have a difficult time getting adopted, explained Stott. The foster home-based cat rescue organization has about 20 active foster homes at any given time, which are within a 30-minute radius of Somerville.

The medical, safety and behavioral risks associated with cat declawing had animal advocates calling the practice inhumane, which has led to the ban on declawing in Massachusetts.

Cat declawing is an amputation procedure that removes the last bone of each toe including the nail bed and claw, akin to removing a human finger at the first knuckle.

In addition to a painful recovery, Stott says cats that have undergone the amputation procedure will exhibit "emotional dysregulation" resulting in aversion to litter boxes and a tendency to bite. Numerous studies point to a correlation between declawing and personality changes.

Stott says her organization doesn't receive many cats that have been declawed and that in the recent past most veterinarians have refused to do the procedure unless it is medically necessary.

The all-volunteer network fosters homeless cats, whether they be feral or stray cats, owner surrenders, cats from local shelters or cats from other rescue organizations.

"Some cats go up for adoption more quickly than others...some need more intervention," Stott explains. "These are people that want to volunteer their time and their homes to taking care of homeless cats. It's wonderful for the cats because they get a home life and are treated just like a pet cat while they are waiting to be adopted."

Stott works with these foster caregivers to assist in the cat's recovery and stays in constant communication to determine the correct form of care needed. In certain cases, a licensed behaviorist attends to the cat.

All the cats require some kind of veterinarian care – from vaccinations to chemotherapy to surgeries – and Stott says they've had many medical success stories. "We give our cats every medical chance that they can have," Stott said.

For example, a 4-year-old special needs female cat named Midnight is in a foster home and is awaiting adoption. Midnight came to Black Cat Rescue with a severe spinal injury after a dog attack that left her incontinent and with a dead tail. Midnight's tail had to be amputated, and she has received acupuncture and cold laser therapy to assist in her recovery. Her incontinence has become more manageable and she has shown "remarkable resilience and strength."

Black Cat Rescue stays operational thanks to generous donations that come from animal lovers in Somerville and Greater Boston. On their website, a support page provides information about various ways to help fund their organization. Visitors can also find cats available for adoption.

Their website has more information: www.BlackCatRescue.com.

Griddled and baked - the art of Vinal Bakery and Vinal General Store

By Jeffrey Shwom

Now, I jokingly tell friends that I have never cared much about British things since we revolted in 1775. When Prince William and Princess Kate visited Greentown Labs in 2022, I went to Market Basket that day in support of local business (plus the parking lot was empty due to heavy security and road closures).

Revolution aside, when I learned that English muffins, much like the bagel, have really become an American story, my interest was piqued. And to then learn that Sarah Murphy's story of creating her wonderful English muffins was similar to the originator of the American version of the bread, well...

According to gourmet food purveyor Harry & David [1], British expat Samuel Bath Thomas "found work in a New York City bakery and developed his own version of what he later trademarked as the English muffin. In 1880, he launched his own bakery and sold...a pre-cut, thinner version known for its signature nooks and crannies."

Sarah, Owner and Pastry Chef of Vinal Bakery and Vinal General Store (and Somerville resident), created her version of the English muffin after working her way through the local bakery scene. She worked a long time at Joanne Chang's Flour Bakery + Cafe, knowing she always wanted her own place with a great breakfast sandwich. So, she gained experience post-Flour "at a few professional shops so (the idea) was not a Flour duplicate." Lucky for us, she ended up at Cambridge's award winning Bagelsaurus. Mary Ting Hyatt started Bagelsaurus as a pop up in Brookline and Sarah got to hone her English muffins skills there.

What makes an English muffin? I got schooled quickly. "An English muffin has to be griddled, and has to be able to, like, hold a sandwich," Sarah deftly relayed. "If you do not griddle, it is not an English muffin. If you cannot split it open, it's a pancake. Ours are a little bigger so we finish them in the oven so they are not doughy." Some of the currently available English muffin flavors include multigrain, pumpernickel (flavor of the month), French toast, and classic. The English muffin egg and cheese sandwiches (think of "Miss Maple" with her cheddar cheese and maple butter, or the "Sausage McVinal" with an over medium egg, cheddar cheese, turkey sausage, and spicy mayo) are divine. They even have a griddled meatloaf sandwich that was featured on Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives.

When Vinal Bakery opened, there was hesitation about not offering another bread. Sarah told me days before opening, "we were still thinking about two other breads. We thought 'let's ride with English muffins for a while.'" And they have never turned back and in fact, have turned their small business game up.

Known for their "Sandos, Suds, sundries & soft serve," sister spot Vinal General Store next door has more of a lunch focus. The menu offers deli sandwiches, coffee and espresso, beer and wine, and soft serve, alongside food gifts and treats. Sarah said that is it "our take on retail goods." They carry a mix of small, niche, US-made items. "They fit the food gifts (category). Great things to bring to a host of a party." It is quite literally their take on a New England general store. The name

Vinal is an ode to the street she's lived on in Somerville and whose namesake, Robert A. Vinal, owned a mercantile building [2] in Union Square that sold grains and groceries. Moreover, Sarah is from New Hampshire and Chloe Nolan, director of operations, who helped open the general store, is from the South Shore.

Sarah retold, "I opened (the bakery) very intentionally with a business plan. The general store was the opposite. It was 'Let's build a business plan to fit the space.'" Post-pandemic, a good relationship with the landlord and a fire in a laundromat created an opportunity for expansion. "The landlord converted it to a white box and we said, 'let's take it.' It gives us more space for the bakery." Yum for all those involved.

Vinal Bakery and Vinal General Store are at 222 and 220 Somerville Avenue respectively, on the backside of the Police Headquarters and across from Rococo Florist. Visit www.vinalbakery.com and www.vinalgeneralstore.com.

utility bill, lease or mortgage; or pay stubs showing Massachusetts employment. The residency requirement would not apply to victims of domestic violence or to any person whose living situation has been affected by a fire or other natural disaster that occurred in the Bay State.

“The original Right to Shelter law was implemented more than 40 years ago to help provide housing assistance for Massachusetts residents in need, particularly pregnant women and children,” said amendment sponsor Rep. Brad Jones (R-North Reading). “Over the last two years, the scope of the program has expanded to the point that people are coming to Massachusetts from other states seeking assistance, which is not in keeping with the original intent of the law. This amendment will restore the focus of the law to prioritize Massachusetts residents in need of housing services.”

Rep. Alice Peisch (D-Wellesley) said that we are talking about families with children and to place further restrictions on this program during the cold winter months is cruel. She noted that the bill already places more significant verification requirements regarding residency.”

REQUIRE REPORTS (H 57)

House 152-0, approved an amendment that would require the Healey administration to report the number of families exiting the emergency assistance housing program each week because of a durational limit.

“This data will reveal whether families are leaving because they’ve secured stable housing or due to the system’s time constraints,” said amendment sponsor Rep. Michael Finn (D-West Springfield) It will determine if current resources are effectively helping families regain stability in a quick and efficient manner, or if future adjustments to the system are needed.”

RULING OF THE CHAIR ON ICE DETAINER AMENDMENT (H 57)

House 128-24, supported the ruling of the chair that a proposed amendment that would have required the Executive Office of Housing and Livable Communities to collaborate with ICE regarding detainees issued for dangerous criminal aliens, was beyond the scope of the shelter bill and should not be allowed on the House floor for debate.

Rep. Marc Lombardo (R-Billerica), the sponsor of the amendment said that the amendment would make it clear that we want these monsters off the streets and will take proactive actions to protect Massachusetts residents.

He urged members to oppose the ruling of the chair so that his amendment can be debated and voted upon. “It is simply outrageous that this amendment was ruled out of scope as it pertained to the operations of the shelter system which was the exact scope of the underlying bill,” said Lombardo. “The reality is that the majority party realized it would be a terrible amendment for them to vote against so instead, they ruled it out of scope to prevent political embarrassment.”

Rep. Danielle Gregoire (D-Marlborough) supported the ruling of the chair that this amendment is beyond the scope of this narrowly tailored funding bill. She added that there are several pieces of legislation that have been filed this session that will deal with this issue and the House can debate the issue at that time.

(A “Yes” vote supports the ruling of the chair that prohibits the amendment from being debated and voted upon on by the House. A “No” vote is against the ruling and favors the amendment being debated and voted upon.)

GOV. MAURA HEALEY ANNOUNCES SHE WILL RUN FOR RE-ELECTION IN 2026 – In a radio interview on WGBH Radio (89.7 FM) with talk show hosts Jim Braude and Margery Eagan, Gov. Healey said she plans to run for reelection in 2026.

“There’s a heck of a lot more to do, she said. “And so I plan to run for re-election. I’m really proud of the record so far.”

The Massachusetts Republican Party released a statement saying they were “confident that voters will reject another four years of the Healey-Driscoll Administration and elect a common-sense Republican.”

$850,000 TO HELP YOUNG ADULTS WITH DISABILITIES – Gov. Healey announced more than $850,000 in grants to fund several organizations that provide job training, employment placement and post placement services for 119 young adults with disabilities.

“We are building a strong workforce in Massachusetts, and this includes providing opportunities and training for individuals who face barriers to employment,” said Gov. Healey. “These grants will help develop and fulfill the immense potential of this segment of our workforce as we create an economy for today and tomorrow.”

“The Healey-Driscoll Administration is committed to working with partners to increase access, break down barriers and create pathways to meaningful employment including for individuals with disabilities,” said Secretary of Labor and Workforce Development Lauren Jones. “We appreciate the partnership with awarded organizations as we work together to strengthen employment outcomes, foster inclusivity and advance economic opportunities for individuals with disabilities in Massachusetts’ workforce.”

ATTORNEY GENERAL CAMPBELL ON PROTECTING ACCESS TO GENDER-AFFIRMING CARE – Massachusetts Attorney General Andrea Campbell and a coalition of twelve other attorneys general issued a statement reaffirming their commitment to protecting access to gender-affirming care following a recent executive order by the Trump Administration.

“As state attorneys general, we stand firmly in support of healthcare policies that respect the dignity and rights of all people,” read the statement. “Health care decisions should be made by patients, families and doctors, not by a politician trying to use his power to restrict your freedoms. Gender-affirming care is essential, life-saving medical treatment that supports individuals in living as their authentic selves.”

The statement continued, “The Trump Administration’s recent executive order is wrong on the science and the law. Despite what the Trump Administration has suggested, there is no connection between “female genital mutilation” and gender-affirming care, and no federal law makes gender-affirming care unlawful. President Trump cannot change that by executive order.”

Taking Davis Square Higher?

By Denise Provost

People all over town are talking about the 25-story building proposed for Davis Square. The most asked question seems to be, are you for it, or against it? But it seems to me that this question is premature.

We probably all have first reactions to the concept of a 500-apartment high-rise. But whatever these initial feelings, it will help to have more detailed information.

Here are some of the questions I've asked myself:

How big is a 25-story building?

Really big, as it turns out. Crane-your-neck big.

Look, for instance, at Somerville's Clarendon Hill Towers

(Broadway at Alewife Brook Parkway). Each of the three residential buildings in that complex is 12 stories tall. Stack two of them, you'll get 24 floors.

That's basically the same height as the 25-story building proposed for Davis Square. A building of that size qualifies as a high-rise, a category of structures from 12 to 39 floors.

Are there other buildings of this size in Somerville?

Nearby residential buildings of this size include:

- Somerville's tallest building, the "Prospect Union Square." It's visible from quite a distance. 314 of its 450 apartments are in its 25-story tower, 136 more in an adjacent midrise building.

- The highest building at Assembly Square is the 24-story "Miscela at Assembly Row." As with the Union Square complex, not all its 500 units are in the tower.

- In Cambridge, the residential "Proto Kendall Square" building has 500 units in 22 stories.

How did these high-rise buildings get built?

Looking at these new high-rise buildings, one wonders – how did their developers find the land to build them on? Big lots are hard to find in urban areas. Large projects typically need vacant land - which often has to be made vacant through demolition.

As it happens, all three high-rises mentioned above stand on land taken by eminent domain through the urban renewal process.

"Prospect Union Square" sits on two former junkyards - Kiley Barrel, and A-1 Plumbing (memorable for its display of used radiators). This land became available for development through the Union Square Urban Renewal Plan. The redevelopment of Assembly Square and Kendall Square also came about through the urban renewal process.

I'm not suggesting that Davis Square is likely to become an urban renewal area. That process starts with a declaration that an area is "blighted." It just happens that urban land for large developments is often acquired this way.

What else is there to consider about this proposal?

The height and bulk of the 25-story high-rise proposed for Davis Square raises more questions, such as:

- What is the size and shape of the building's footprint? We ought to have the chance to see this land area outlined in bright marker on a map of Davis Square, if not spray painted in the square itself.

- How big are the cranes that will be needed to construct a 25-story building? Where will they be located, and for how long?

- Will the developer want to construct lower rise buildings next to it, as some other such projects have been designed?

- Will the developer want to acquire adjacent land in the square as part of this project?

- Don't we need to visualize how a large-scale tower will fit into small-scale Davis Square?

Wikipedia describes Davis Square not as a business district but as a "major intersection." Can the developer show us photos or videos of comparable towers fitting into small business districts in other MA cities?

The public meeting about the proposed "Copper Mill" development will take place on Wednesday, February 12, at 6 p.m. at the Somerville Community Baptist Church, 31 College Ave. I'm sure that other questions will come up at the meeting.

(Note: all the information in this piece comes from publicly available sources, mainly developer/owners/marketers, municipalities, and other permitting authorities.)

Attorney Denise Provost joined the City of Somerville's Law Department in 1984, and entered private practice in 1990. She served as Alderman at Large from 2000 to 2006, and as State Representative for Somerville's 27th Middlesex District from 2006 to 2021.

[The bill] would give athletes and coaches the legal right to opt out of competitions against the opposite sex without fear of discipline." — Statement by the Massachusetts Family Institute (MFI).

"It sickens me to see that any legislator in Massachusetts would partner with this organization to incite fearmongering and disinformation at the expense of children." — Tanya Neslusan, Executive Director of Mass Equality on what it calls MFI's activities to promote discriminatory bills impacting transgender youth and anti-LGBTQ policies at the state and local level by engaging in disinformation campaigns and encouraging hateful propaganda against the LGBTQ communities across the state.

"I think after witnessing last year's coin toss, and to my knowledge – and please correct me if I'm wrong – there was no problem with betting integrity that took place. I looked in all the jurisdictions and I Googled as many news articles as I could to see if any betting integrity [issues] took place. There are other prop bets, like the Gatorade color over the coach, the national anthem length, and we, of course, decided we didn't want to go that far. But I think the coin toss is something we should be revisiting." — Massachusetts Gaming Commissioner Brad Hill on the commission's 3-2 vote to allow sports betting companies in the Bay State to offer wagers on the Super Bowl opening coin toss.

HOW LONG WAS LAST WEEK'S SESSION?

Beacon Hill Roll Call tracks the length of time that the House and Senate were in session each week. Many legislators say that legislative sessions are only one aspect of the Legislature's job and that a lot of important work is done outside of the House and Senate chambers. They note that their jobs also involve committee work, research, constituent work and other matters that are important to their districts. Critics say that the Legislature does not meet regularly or long enough to debate and vote in public view on the thousands of pieces of legislation that have been filed. They note that the infrequency and brief length of sessions are misguided and lead to irresponsible late-night sessions and a mad rush to act on dozens of bills in the days immediately preceding the end of an annual session. During the week of Feb. 3-7, the House met for a total of six hours and 13 minutes while the Senate met for a total of 11 minutes.

Mon Feb. 3 House 11:02 a.m. to 11:10 a.m.
Senate 11:20 a.m. to 11:26 a.m.

Tues. Feb. 4 No House session
No Senate session

Wed. Feb. 5 No House session
No Senate session

Thurs. Feb. 6 House 1:01 a.m. to 5:06 p.m.
Senate 11:28 a.m. to 11:33 a.m.

Fri. Feb. 7 No House session
No Senate session

SENIOR CENTER HAPPENINGS:

Medical Equipment Program – Through the generosity of the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA), and from the direction of Mayor Balantyne, the Council on Aging can provide Durable Medical Equipment at no cost to Somerville residents. Residents with a documented need for medical equipment must be over the age of 60, or have a permanent disability, and must be otherwise unable to afford or access needed medical equipment. We currently have available: Commodes, Bath Benches, Rollator Walkers, Incontinence Supplies and Transport Wheelchairs (wheelchairs are intended for transport and are not self-propelling or self-breaking.) For additional information, or for an application, please contact Debby Higgins at 617-625-6600, ext. 2321.

Lockboxes for Seniors – What is the Lockboxes for Seniors program? The Lockboxes for Seniors program is intended to provide Police, Fire and Emergency Medical Services (EMS) access to your residence in the event of an emergency where you are unable to open the door. A key to your residence will be stored in a secure metal storage device, like a realtor's lockbox, at your residence. The access code to the lockbox will only be available to Police, Fire, or EMS personnel and used only during an emergency. Who is eligible? The program is targeted towards Somerville community members who live alone and are aged 65+, or those who are disabled and/or suffer from major medical illness at any age. Individuals living in apartment complexes or other facilities with maintenance staff are not eligible for this program. How do I know this is safe? A member of the Somerville Fire Department will install and demonstrate how the lockbox operates and answer any questions you may have. The four-digit combination on the lockbox will only be available to respond to emergency personnel in the event of an emergency. Who should I contact for more information? For more information, please contact Debby Higgins at the Council on Aging via E-mail at dhiggins@somervillema.gov or by telephone at (617) 625-6600 ext. 2321. There is no charge to participate in the program if you meet the established target criteria. The Council on Aging will verify eligibility for services. This program is designed for those who are at most significant risk for falls or have limited mobility. All participants will be required to provide a spare house key to be used in the lock box as well as a safety inspection of the property.

Somerville Fair Housing Commission
Question of the week

Q: My landlord wants access to my apartment. Is this allowed?

A: Yes, the landlord is allowed “reasonable access” to your apartment, which usually means that they must give you 24 hours notice to determine a convenient time for both parties. You must comply if they have a reason such as inspections, repairs, or showing the unit to prospective tenants or buyers. In addition, if there is an emergency, the landlord is allowed access.

The Somerville Fair Housing Commission generally meets on the fourth Thursday of each month at 3 p.m. online. Call 617-625-6600 ext. 2578 for the login information.

All Somerville residents should be on the lookout for the 2025 annual City of Somerville census in their mailbox. The 2025 census form also includes an application to vote by mail in Somerville's preliminary and city elections this year. High census participation provides an accurate population count, which helps the city plan municipal services, apply for grants, and adapt as the population changes. The Elections Department also uses the census to help keep voting rolls up to date. It's easy to take part in the census. Just fill out the short form, be sure to sign and date the form, and then return it one of three ways: mail it back in the provided postage-paid return envelope, scan the form and email is to census@somervillema.gov, or drop it off in person at City Hall (93 Highland Ave.). Contact 311 (617-666-3311) with any questions.

'In the Absence of Birds'
by Ruth C. Chad

In the Absence of Birds
Cervena Barva Press, 2024
by Ruth C. Chad

Review by Off The Shelf correspondent Lee Varon

In this exquisite collection, poet Ruth Chad interweaves her keen attention to the details of our natural world with deep emotions of love, loss, joy, and grief.

Many of the poems in this collection (divided into three sections) focus on the poet's mother who suffered from Alzheimer's before she succumbed to the disease in her 90s. These poems read like journal entries with often just dates for titles

I imagine witnessing a loved one fall into the depths of dementia must be heart-wrenching as one sees the person becoming unmoored from their former life. Chad captures this brilliantly in such poems as April 24:

Last night I dreamt of mermaids in the surf
on the white
wild mane of the waves and floating mussels with no flesh
no byssus attached

Byssus refers to the protein threads that attach mollusks, such as mussels, to solid surfaces.

What a perfect image of her mother, a shell of her former self, totally unable to attach to anything in the world around her.

Chad is not afraid to plumb the complexities of the mother/daughter relationship. In If Only, she laments the strictures of her mother's life.

...Long after her death
I will wish that my mother had been freed of the yellow walls of our split level
that she could have walked calmly away
from the turquoise kitchen apron trailing behind her in the grass
that she could have walked
calmly away
into the moonrise and left a path

Chad's poems are a testament of how we go on, how we manage devastating things and come to terms with them. One thing poetry can do so well is help us survive difficult times and certainly Chad's poems provide this solace. Through her poetry, she illustrates how it feels to see a loved one slip into illness and infirmity, but she also shows us how one takes in the fullness of another's life and, in so doing, transmutes this loss into a triumph of the spirit.

These poems are artfully crafted with deceptive simplicity. Often, Chad dispenses with punctuation altogether and the beauty of her words on the page shines forth with its power and resonance. Most of these poems are no longer than a page and among these the poet intersperses haiku and other short poems which serve to crystallize her message as in this poem after her mother's passing:

February 14
I cried when I dropped the teacup robin's egg blue
shattered shards of china on my kitchen floor
it was yours

No extra words slow the conveyance of the deep emotion in such poems.

There are poems in this collection about travel, the process of aging, and about other family members. All of these are imbued with Chad's keen attention to the natural world and breathtaking images as in lines from Life in the Pandemic: Continued on page 23

Dennis Daly was born in Salem Massachusetts. He graduated from Boston College with a B.S. degree and earned an M.A. degree in English Literature at Northeastern University. He has twice visited Thomas Merton's hermitage on the grounds of the Trappist Abbey of Gethsemani in Kentucky. Daly has published eleven books of poetry and poetic translations. Please visit his blog here: denisdaly.blogspot.com.

Lines Written for Thomas Merton

Joining a community of silence
Does not a hermit make. Perish the thought.
They built him a hermitage for penance
Or pain. His blocks of solitude hardbought.

Much more than muteness or dental drill,
He saw Paradise in tangible ways,
Until 4th and Walnut in Louisville,
Where humanity shines when Merton prays.

Friendship by letter came naturally—
Pasternak, Pope John, and Dorothy Day.
His brother's wartime death certainly key.
His poetry once said, would not unsay.

Over monastic wall the prodigal
Escaped for liquor and a pack of smokes.
His conversation turned to conjugal,
Outraging an abbot and other folks.

Religion's next future he spoke about.
They found him under an electric fan.
No autopsy needed. There was some doubt:
Heart attack or CIA bogeyman.

Mayor Ballantyne joins New England Donor Services, RMV and Heart Recipients to celebrate Valentine’s Day and encourage people to get The Heart by registering as an organ donor when getting one’s license

On Friday, February 14th at 10:30 AM ET, state and local officials and New England Donor Services (NEDS) will join with local donor recipients and families at Somerville City Hall to honor the incredible gift of life on National Donor Day. As part of the organization’s “Have a Heart and get a Heart” campaign, which takes place during National Heart Month and Valentine’s Day, the event will feature local heart transplant recipient, Kenny Laferriere. Kenny received his heart transplant in 2001 after the left ventricle of his heart was damaged when he had cancer as a child.

Since receiving the gift of life, Kenny married his wife, Kim, and together they are now proud parents of two boys. To “pay it forward” and to help others, he is incredibly proud to work as a Hospital Donation Strategist at NEDS. Also there to share her story will be Susan Flint, mother of Lucas Flint who was killed by a drunk driver when he was only 21. He saved five lives through organ donation, one of them being Lucas’ heart recipient, who Susan has connected with in recent years.

The event will commemorate those who have given the gift of life, their families, and those still waiting for life-saving transplants, and encourage their constituents to register as organ donors. The event comes as NEDS has achieved a record number of life-saving deceased donor organ donations and transplants in its New England service area for four consecutive years. In 2024, 648 deceased donors donated organs resulting in 1,570 life-saving transplants.

This record level of clinical activity places NEDS among the nation’s top three organ procurement organizations by donor volume. Since 2020, NEDS has increased the annual number of organ donors by 80 percent.

The event will include: Mayor Katjana Ballantyne Kenny Laferriere, Heart Transplant Recipient + Susan Flint, Donor Mother & NEDS Volunteer + MA Registry of Motor Vehicle Leadership + Matt Boger, Director of Government Relations, New England Donor Services (NEDS)

A hundred sparrows
gather in the firs flutter against each other feathers bronze umber
their chatter fills the lilac sky...

And in another poem, Ice After a Storm, the poet writes:

I shudder
in chill crusty morning
awed by the cold fist of sun and how small I am standing here
under the great loud beeches like a girl in the circus crowd the wild universe
whirling around me

Certainly, the poems in this enduring collection engender an equal sense of awe.
